Age: People of any age may hold an Amateur Radio license but a certain level of ability, knowledge, and concentration are necessary to pass the test. Those 12 years old & up generally do well. It's possible a younger child could pass the exam given sufficient desire to do so, commitment, and ability to learn.

Parents: Children under the age of 18 must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian. You will be expected to attend the classes with your child so plan on making this an activity you do together. No parent/guardian, no class, no exceptions.

Pre-study: Before attending the first session, the student will be expected to have read and memorized the questions in Chapters 1, 6, 7, and 8. These chapters are: "Welcome to Amateur Radio", "Communicating with Other Hams", "Licensing Regulations", and "Operating Regulations". Class time won't be devoted to these topics, other than to answer specific questions someone may have at the start of the first class. You will need to know this material in order to pass the license exam. Plan to stay an extra hour or two on the final day to complete the exam process.
